knows that better than Dr. Richard Ragle, a board certified osteopathic family practice physician. Delivering babies and assisting in the dying process has provided him with insight and perspectives which are skillfully expressed in masterpiece sculptures.

Once in a gallery outside of Santa Fe New Mexico, a Native American believed his soul to be blessed after viewing Dr. Ragle's "Logan" sculpture. After deep inhalation and exhalation while touching it, the gentleman explained that he was breathing its energy in, and extending a blessing to it. This was to make it part of himself, and him to it; "in my culture when we see something that blesses our soul, we breathe its energy into our being . . . bless it, and then exhale our blessing onto the piece. In this way it is always a part of us, and we of it."

Obviously, Dr. Ragle succeeds in reaching his goal of opening peoples' hearts to their own spiritual truths!

Born in Denver, Dr.Ragle currently lives in the majestic mountains of Sandia Park, New Mexico between Santa Fe and Albuquerque.
